Course Description
This course will provide an introduction to pedagogy for theological educators. The primary focus of the course will be on a) the vocation of teaching theology and b) basic pedagogical principles for the theology classroom. Students will engage educational and sociological research relevant to teaching high school and learn pedagogical techniques which build upon this research. Much of the class will be spent working through how to teach key doctrinal moments in the U.S. Catholic Bishops’ High School Curriculum Framework in a pedagogically effective manner.

Course Goals
By the end of the course, students will be able to:
1) Articulate a vision of theological education in terms of:
   a. The nature of theology as a discipline
   b. The vocation of a theological educator
   c. Sociological research into high school students today.
2) Describe and employ basic principles of course design, including the ability to:
   a. Articulate a clear vision for a high school theology course
   b. Develop a basic plan for assessing student learning
   c. Develop well-structured and sensible unit and lesson plans
3) Engage and apply key findings from research into student learning
4) Thoughtfully reflect upon the dynamics of the classroom

Course Requirements
Class Participation (20%)
Much of this course will be run on the mode of discussion and thus regular participation is required. Students are expected to come to class a) on time, b) having read and engaged the course material, and c) ready to thoughtfully discuss the material in class. In-class teaching opportunities are included under participation.

Short Papers (20%)
Throughout the course there are small reflections or drafts of teaching materials due. Details on each of these will be given in class or through Sakai.

Major Papers (60%)
There will be two major “papers” for the course. The following is the requirement for all of those preparing to teaching in the fall. Others in the course are encouraged to follow the same structure, but adjustments are possible in consultation with the professor.

“Paper” 1: At the end of the second week, students will turn in a basic plan for teaching a particular high school theology course. This will include a complete course plan, a completed unit plan for every unit of the course, two “ready-to-teach” lesson plans, and a reflection on pedagogical principles.

“Paper” 2: The final assignment is due on the last day of class. This paper will be a “portfolio” for a particular high school theology course, including overall course goals, basic unit plans, one completely planned unit of the course, and a brief reflection on pedagogical principles.

Course Policies
Attendance is required. Students may miss one class without penalty. Each additional absence will result in the reduction of the student’s grade by one letter grade.

Laptops and tablets are permitted, but should only be used for activities related to the class.

The Notre Dame Academic Code of Honor Pledge is observed in this course. “As a member of the Notre Dame community, I will not participate in or tolerate academic dishonesty.” Any plagiarism on written assignments will result in an F for the assignment and possibly an F for the course. A description of plagiarism can be found in the Academic Code of Honor section IV.B.

If you have a documented disability that will require accommodation in this course, please contact the Office of Disability Services (http://disabilityservices.nd.edu/, 574-631-7157) for assistance in developing a plan to address your academic needs. I am eager to accommodate your needs but I will be unable to do so without communication from Disability Services.

This course, in both classroom discussions and written work, will be conducted according to the standard set forth by the Department of Theology with regard to Inclusive Language. The Departmental Inclusive Statement can be viewed here: http://theology.nd.edu/about/inclusive-language-statement/.

Reading Guide for Days 2-3

On the second and third days of class will focus on generating a “vision for Catholic education” in dialogue with the work of James Heft, John Cavadini, and Kenda Creasy Dean. Unless completed before the course begins, the reading listed is too long to be read closely in its entirety. It is recommended that students skim the whole and slow down at particular parts of interest. As you read, prepare answers to the following questions:

- In light of Heft (and Christian Smith and Sherry Weddell from day 1), what are the most important cultural points with regards to American teens that must be kept in mind by teachers of theology?
- In light of Heft, what are the overarching goals/purposes of Catholic education? What is the place of the (theology) teaching within his vision of Catholic high schools?
- In light of Cavadini, what is the place of teaching doctrine within Catholic education? What is the purpose of teaching doctrine?
- What elements from Dean’s positive vision for the Church would you integrate in a vision for Catholic high school teaching?

In terms of particular sections from Heft and Dean, I would recommend paying particular attention to the following:

- Characteristics of Catholicism applied to Catholic schools (Heft, 76-81)
- Unique characteristics of Catholic Schools (Heft, 82-88, 209-212)
- Sociological Studies and Three Recommendations (Heft, 154-167)
- The role of the teacher (Heft, 70-71, 173-176, 181-182)
- Religion and faith in American (Dean, 6-7, 16-17)
- Weaknesses in articulating and practicing the faith (Dean, 19, 28)
- Confronting Moralistic Therapeutic Deism (Dean, 37-39)
- Generative faith: missionary identity and the “cultural toolkit” (Dean, 63-81)
